

How Art Heals Us

Art

is a Language that goes beyond words... and tells our story for us.

We may instinctively believe that ART
& CREATIVITY promote wellness.

But HOW?

The ANATOMY of ART as THERAPY

Childhood - our foundation in life is a body experience.
Motor activity develops the brain.

Art is a BODY experience

Art happens BELOW THE NECK, where early childhood memories are stored pre-verbally.

The brain is clever

it can protect itself from overload by "cutting off" memories of toxic stress.

The imprints of trauma are organized as FRAGMENTS... sensory and emotional traces that don't make sense.

Trauma lives on in your body in the form of physical sensations and behavior patterns.

Our brains help us survive adverse childhood experiences & other traumas by acting “as if”

As if it never happened

As if it isn't important

Trauma lives on in your body in the form of physical sensations and behavior patterns.

but... our body and our nervous system REMEMBER

Trauma lives on in your body in the form of physical sensations and behavior patterns.

Many people brace against their inner sensations and ignore their bodies signals.

The somatic experience of making art offers a “bottom up” approach to accessing emotions...

And is often more effective than the “Top Down” approach of traditional talk therapy alone.

By engaging the body in sensory art experiences, we gain access to stored feelings & give them voice.

Healing from trauma = reactivating the brain, reconnecting the disconnected parts, and making the unconscious, conscious.

One ACTIVATING way to do that is through making art.

ART GIVES US ACCESS to our unconscious

CONNECTION and “The Compassionate Witness”

Resilience

builds when traumas are shared with a trusted witness.

“the therapeutic relationship”

To Recap: WHY ART?

authentic art experience help us

Access & Release memories & emotions stored in our bodies.

ACCESS
EXPRESS RELEASE

Art is the perfect healing tool when are feeling emotions that are tucked away from memory, too hidden to access...
much less to express.

Expressive art can help us all reduce stress and channel emotions. And it is especially valuable for children and adults who have experienced trauma...

altered brain development lack of focus impaired decision making high risk behaviors

As well as teachers and caregivers who may deal with both primary and secondary trauma themselves

Expressive Art benefits children and adults alike

Art making is a mind-body experience that calms our body's stress response, offers access to hidden memories, and provides AUTHENTIC SELF EXPRESSION

The freedom of choice, thought & feeling
